

The two dogs, my good buddy and I went for a walk in the national forest. It was below zero. The streams were covered with ice and the cascading falls were flowing behind the ice. The dogs jumped into the pools under the falls and shook violently. They jumped out ready to hike a few more miles.

I was driving in New Hampshire to see my sister's family for Christmas. It was below zero and I was driving 70 down the interstate. My dog Bear had his head out the window of the pickup camper barking like he was the most fortunate dog on the planet.

My wife says I don't think you should put the dogs out, it is below zero and the wind is howling. I let the three dogs out. They all ran around in the moonlight like I had made their night. After about 30 minutes the big white dog laid down on the asphalt driveway and fell asleep. The other two kept chasing each other up and down the snow piles, eating the snow every once in a while to quench their thirst. After about an hour the big white dog woke up and I let them all back in the house.

Dogs love the Earth and the weather just the way it is. They live everywhere and they are happy. Why do dogs put up with humans and honor them like they do?

Humans are bulldozing, drilling and mining the Earth away so that they can live how they want to anywhere on the Earth rather than like the dogs do. Soon the Earth will be too toxic for even dogs.

I am now 63 years old. When I was 12 years old I wrote a paper on how the bulldozer had destroyed the earth. Funny, there are still people who believe it is not destroyed. Some of these people think it is ridiculous that people believe in a Creator.

For 44 years I have seen people who call themselves environmentalists live lives that require the earth to be bulldozed, drilled and mined. Now many of these environmentalists want us to bulldoze drill and mine the earth more to make solar panels, wind turbines, electric batteries, green factories, cell towers, etc. Instead they could live much simpler like my dogs. Universities claim they are the answer to our environmental problems. Yet, they build luxurious places so that students get addicted to living lives that depend on us to bulldoze, drill and mine the earth.

I just watched a film called Chasing Ice that indicated that fossil fuels are destroying our climate and Earth. However, next year we will bulldoze, drill and mine several hundred mountains away to make the high tech equipment, helicopters, airplanes, auditoriums, computers, etc. needed to make that movie. The main character in the film lives in a rather luxurious house. During the film, it was shown that he was destroying his knees instead of worrying about taking care of them for his family. He believed the doctors could repair any damage that he did to his body. Sort of like some environmentalists believe about Earth.

Dogs and humans and the relationship dogs have for humans are living proof we understand very little about evolution. However, Isaac Newton wrote in his diary that in the 21st century technology would be controlling mankind, the world would be in social unrest and the earth would be in peril. He wrote that he learned this from reading the Bible daily and studying the history of man. He also wrote I can calculate the motion of the planets, but not the madness of men. Newton also wrote that he believed Wisdom would come to the rescue. We do not see that in man.
